

In a sunny and colorful world, there were two friends named Ray and Yan. They did everything together and shared lots of laughter.

Ray and Yan were known for their kindness and forgiving nature.

One day, while playing their favorite game, Ray accidentally bumped into Yan and knocked down their tower of blocks.

The blocks scattered on the floor, and Yan felt upset.

Ray quickly realized the mistake and said, "I'm sorry, Yan. It was an accident. I didn't mean to knock down our tower."

Yan took a deep breath and replied, "I know it was an accident, Ray. I felt sad, but I forgive you."

Ray felt relieved and said, "Thank you, Yan.
I promise to be more careful next time."

Their friendship grew even stronger because of their forgiving hearts. They continued playing together and having fun.

A few days later, it was Yan's turn to make a mistake.

While drawing a picture, Yan accidentally spilled paint on Ray's favorite book.

Ray felt upset, but quickly remembered how Yan forgave them before.

Ray took a deep breath and said, "Yan, I know it was an accident, and I forgive you for spilling paint on my book."

Yan felt grateful and said, "Thank you, Ray. I'll be more careful next time, and I'm sorry for making a mess."

Ray and Yan knew that everyone makes mistakes, and forgiveness is important. They learned that saying sorry and forgiving each other brings happiness and keeps their friendship strong.

From that day forward, Ray and Yan promised to always forgive and be understanding when mistakes happen. They knew that forgiving friends makes the world a kinder and happier place.

And so, Ray and Yan continued their adventures, supporting each other and sharing forgiveness along the way.
