There once was a brave boy named Kofi. Kofi loved stories about knights who helped people.

One day, Kofi decided to become a knight
too. He wore a shining armor made of pots
and pans and carried a wooden sword.

Kofi went on an adventure to help people in his village. He saw a farmer whose animals were lost. Kofi helped find them.

Then, he saw a sad friend who lost a kite. Kofi climbed a tree and got it back.

People heard about Kofi's brave deeds. They called him "Sir Kofi" and cheered for him.

Kofi felt happy and proud. He continued helping people with a big smile.

He helped fix broken carts, find lost toys, and even cheered up someone who was feeling down.

Kofi's village
became a happier
place because of him.

And so, the story of the brave knight, Kofi, taught us the wonderful value of helping others and making the world a better place.
