In an imaginary world, cars and trucks could talk just like people. They zoomed and vroomed all around.

his name was Carl, always complained. "The road is bumpy," he grumbled. "The weather is too hot."

carl's friends would say,

Be happy, carl!
we're lucky to drive.

one sunny day, carl's tire got flat. He couldn't move.

His friends gathered around to help.

"We'll fix you, Carl," they said.

carl felt worried. He saw how his friends worked together to fix his tire.

After a little while, Carl's tire was fixed. He felt so happy.

He looked around and saw his friends. "Thank you," Carl said with a smile. "I'm grateful to have you all."

From that day on,

carl stopped complaining. He realized how good life was.

And so, the story of the complaining car, Carl, taught us the wonderful value of being grateful and appreciating what we have.
