He thought shadows and sounds were scary monsters. "Daddy, I'm scared!" he said.

Once upon a time, there was a little boy named Liam. Liam was always scared before bed.

Liam's father knew this. He said,
"Let's go on an adventure."

They walked to Liam's room.
Liam saw a big shadow on the wall. "A monster!" he thought.

His father turned on the light. "Look, it's just a teddy bear
casting a shadow."

Then, they heard a sound like a "thump." "A monster!" Liam thought.

Liam smiled. "Not a monster," he said.

His father opened the closet. "See? It's just clothes falling."

Liam giggled. "Not a monster," he said.

Liam's father showed him more things. Each time, Liam saw they were not scary.

"You're safe, Liam," his father said.

Liam felt happy. He hugged his father and went to bed.

He closed his eyes and knew there were no
scary monsters.

And so, the story of Liam's brave bedtime taught us that sometimes things look scary, but they're not.
